A Bucketfilling Back to School!

When I walked through the aisles of my local grocery store last night, I felt overcome with a very peculiar sensation. I felt hope! The barbecue supplies and garden tools were gone. In their place were scissors, pencils, and notebooks! Yes, it's already time to face the "back to school" shopping and planning season. But, unlike the dread that I usually feel, when I think of the early wake-up calls and carpooling, are feelings of thankfulness, renewed optimism, and hope.

Like many parents, I am very thankful that in-person learning is a reality again for my kids. They thrive in a physical classroom and have struggled with virtual learning this past year. I feel indebted to the school staff, who spent the entire year designing new ways to teach and support my children during the pandemic. I have hope that this year will be better, with less anxiety and more confidence, that we can meet adversity with strength. I am optimistic that we can bring more social and emotional support to students that have been isolated for too long.

Our presenter team has been waiting on stand-by, eagerly anticipating their opportunity to get back to sharing, in-person, what they live and love: the bucketfilling concept. I can't think of a more positive and proactive way to start a school year than bucket filling. Success in social and emotional learning is a win-win for all who are invested in students' lives. Bucket filling can be that big, positive difference in your school culture.

Each of our presenters is fully vaccinated and will adhere to all COVID protocols. They are motivated and ready to bring the bucketfilling concept to your organization! You can get more information on our Training Opportunities on our website.

We want to help you get your classroom ready for a bucketfilling start to the new school year! We have discounted the prices on our entire catalog of bucketfilling products! Take advantage of these discounts and shop our store, now through August 31, 2021.

We're in the last two weeks of our Happiness Book Tour! Follow the tour online on at HappinessBookTour.com or @BucketFillers1 on your favorite social channels. There's still time to enter our giveaway!

To a great school year,
